問1 次の英文を和訳しなさい。

Community dance is a workshop-style form of dance where anyone—regardless of age, gender, dance experience, or disability—can experience creating and dancing together. In these workshops, rather than teaching fixed techniques, dance artists serve as facilitators, leading activities that encourage participants to connect, collaborate, and express themselves through dancing. Participants share the joy of dancing together while embracing each other's individuality and differences.

The current LTAD model provides no indication of a “window of opportunity” for power development during childhood. This may be due to the fact that as the product of force (strength) and velocity (speed), the “windows of opportunity” have already been included in the model for the component parts of power production. However, given the importance of muscular power for athletic success, it may be appropriate to consider the most appropriate period during which to train for power during childhood. Owing to the minimal number of longitudinal-based studies examining the interaction of growth, maturation, and trainability on muscular power, it is difficult to identify whether a window of opportunity exists to maximize power development.
